STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The Lewiston Y. M. C. A. will have a new General Secretary in the field, about Oct. 10th, when the course of entertainments will be announced for the fall and winter. This course will probably surpass that of last year. The managers will have a gymnasium fitted up as soon as can be, on the arrival of the secretary.

The Lewiston Journal says: The little Rawstron boy, who was run over by the train, the first of August, and suffered amputation of the hip joint, is out doors on his crutches, and as chipper as can be. The case is remarkable, since so few recover from such operations. It is said that no case up to 1864 was ever known to be brought to a successful issue, and the recorded cases of recovery are rare.

The Lewiston Fire Department is to entertain a crack hose company from Salem, Mass., on Oct. 4th and 5th, the dates of the County Fair. The visitors will bring the Salem Brass Band—one of the best in New England. The Lewiston department, although not a uniformed department, will turn out, give the guests a parade and a ball, and will try to make life cheerful for them. Probably the ball will be given in the Skating Rink, since City Hall is engaged by the County Fair.

The air has been full of rumors the past week, about a new prospective paper and pulp mill at Otis Falls. This is one of the best water privileges on the Androscoggin river, and the development of this water power in the very near future is seriously contemplated by some pulp men, of Portland, who have been looking the thing over, and judging from the staking, there will be large buildings. The prospect of a boom looks bright for Livermore Falls, not only on account of the new mills but on account of the many buildings that will be erected.

Trustees Prince, Jerrard and Brackett were in Lewiston the last of the week, with Secretary Dennison and Treasurer Briggs, closing up the business of the State Fair and planning for the future. The bills are nearly all in and the collections mostly made, and the grand result will be at least $7,000 toward paying the debts of the society. Another meeting of the trustees will be held early in October, at which arrangements will be made to take possession of the stand, under the provisions of the lease of land, and by that time the books will be so far arranged that premiums can be paid.

Cumberland.

17,000 pounds of cod and haddock were brought to Portland, Monday.

The importations for the past week at Portland, are 1,030 tons coal to the Grand Trunk; 378 tons coal to J. L. Farmer; 127 tons building stone to the Atlantic Stone Company, and 300 railway ties to the B. & M. R. R.

The press hears that a young man who has lived in Portland the last three years, recently drew drafts on his brother in Boston for small sums, obtaining about $500 in all. The drafts were protested and the young man has left town, but the brother wrote he would try and meet the indebtedness at a future day.

Olivet Commandery, Knights Templar, of Lynn, Mass., will make a pilgrimage to Portland next month, and will be the guests of Portland Commandery. They will arrive on the 13th and remain during the following day, making their headquarters at the Falmouth Hotel.

Monday afternoon Officer John M. Hussey's, of Portland, little three years old daughter fell from a baby carriage in which some children were wheeling her, and broke her right arm at the elbow joint. Doctors Gordon and Johnson were called and after examining the break pronounced it a bad one. The little girl was etherized and her arm put in a splint.

At the stated meeting of Grand Canton Ridgeley, No. 2, Patriarchs Militant, held last evening, it was voted to tender the courtesies of this Canton to the Cantons of Manchester and Concord, who are to make a visit to Portland on Oct. 4th and 5th. On Tuesday evening, Oct. 4th, a ball and exhibition drill will be tendered them at City Hall by Grand Canton Ridgeley; and on Wednesday, Oct. 5th, a sail down the bay and a clam bake.

Some three years ago, James P. Baxter, Esq., of Portland, the historian, purchased Mackey's Island for $7,000; it contains some eighty-five acres with farm buildings; it lays about a mile to the north of Munjoy Hill, and is connected to the mainland by a sand bar some 1000 feet in length, which is covered at high water. Mr. Baxter is to build a handsome summer residence for himself. A wharf is to be built to accommodate steamboats and for other purposes.

Mr. Gustin, who has been boarding at a private house in Saccarappa with a number of employes in the mills, had his trunk broken open last week and $150 in money stolen therefrom. The day previous to his discovery of the loss of the money, an Englishman, who had been boarding at the same house a short time, notified the landlord that he had secured employment in Portland, and left the village that day, taking all his effects with him. He has not been seen or heard from since.

Hancock.

The Ellsworth customs officials have applied to the Secretary of the Treasury for authority to issue new papers to the schooner Walter M. Young that escaped from the Canadian authorities.

Kennebec.

Mrs. Willis, of Hallowell, has handed the Journal a specimen of some sweet potatoes raised by her this summer. The vine had been grown for ornament, and at the suggestion of a friend some slips from it were planted and quite a little crop raised, some of the tubers being large enough for cooking.

Lincoln.

Hon. John Babson, United States shipping commissioner for the port of Boston, died in Boston, Sunday. Mr. Babson was born in Wiscasset, in 1815. He was a member of the Council of the Governor of Maine in 1851-2, and subsequently was appointed collector of the port of Wiscasset by President Pierce. During the administration of Buchanan he served as vice consul to Canada, and as special treasury agent. He afterward engaged in business in Boston, as merchant tailor in partnership with his brother, William Babson. In 1872, on the passage of the United States shipping act, he was appointed by Judges Clifford, Shipley and Lowell commissioner for the port of Boston, which position he held up to the time of his death.

Piscataquis.

George Larrabee, of Northeast Carry, was arraigned before Trial Justice Brown, at Dover, Monday, charged with shooting John Arboo on Wednesday last; he pleaded not guilty, and his case was continued to Thursday next at 9 A. M.

The largest blast ever set off on the Canadian Pacific thundered forth last Thursday up in Piscataquis county. It was a gigantic one and did its work well. The object was to loosen a large mass of stone on the side of a mountain. A seam was found and thirty-five kegs of blasting powder, together with a large amount of rend rock, was put in. The noise of the explosion could be heard for miles and over 700 cubic yards of solid rock were blown off the side of the mountain. This was probably as large a railroad blast as was ever fired, and there was great excitement over it among the workmen. It is very rough everywhere in that vicinity. One man who has been on the road for eleven years and has worked throughout the country from Maine to the Pacific, says that he never found so rough a place.

Somerset.

Three carriages at J. J. Emery's carriage repository, at West Palmyra, were mutilated with knife and axe by some unknown person, reports the Pittsfield Adverser.

Charlie Welch, the boy who was so badly wounded in the head a few weeks ago, has nearly recovered. He fell from a vessel and a spike penetrated his skull behind the ear, exposing his brains. His physician states that his mind is uninjured and he is able to be up and out of doors.

A valuable carriage horse belonging to Mr. E. F. Hanson, came to her death in a singular manner, recently. The animal was turned into a box stall in the stable at night, and in the morning was found dead with her throat resting across the edge of a box which stood in one corner. In lying down, she had evidently got her head across the box in such a manner that she could not move, and in that position choked to death.

Washington.

As Harold Lamson, a fourteen-year-old son of Capt. Daniel Lamson, of Addison, was hunting in company with Orville Norton, a lad of nearly the same age, the gun of the latter was accidentally discharged, the contents taking effect in Lamson's arm, completely carrying away the muscle, says the Machias Republican.

Miss Abigail Littlefield, of Kennebunkport, the last of her family of thirteen children, and wanting but fifteen days of being ninety-five years old, died recently. She was supposed to be the oldest person in Kennebunkport.

A Biddeford young man started with his intended to go to Amesbury, Mass., to be married, Monday morning, but an officer armed with a warrant for his arrest for debt, intercepted him and he was lodged in the station house, and remained there until he paid the bill he owed, says the Biddeford Journal.

The new carpet loom, recently patented to Geo. Poole, of Sanford, is adapted to weave Wilton carpets, also tapestry, velvet, mohair and silk plushes. Mr. Poole has spent five years in perfecting it and he has other claims for improvements still pending before the patent office. It is claimed to be the fastest pile wire loom in the world, running one hundred and twenty-five picks per minute, as against ninety picks by the fastest looms in this country or England. It is also claimed to be the only successful power loom for weaving mohair, car and furniture plushes.

Marsh A. Emery, aged twenty-two, while assisting an expressman in removing goods from Mrs. O. D. Dolliff's house, in Biddeford, Tuesday afternoon, entered a private room and made off with $30 and some jewelry.

Lieutenant E. L. Zalinski, of the Fifth Artillery, who conducted the dynamite air-gun experiment, at Fort Lafayette, is an old army officer, but looks young. He is of medium height and firmly built. He has ruddy cheeks, a black, full beard, and a straight, evenly cropped bang.

The whole number of casualties reported by the medical corps of Philadelphia during the three days' Constitutional celebration was 384, of which only two were fatal. The majority of the cases were of fainting, exhaustion and other results of fatigue and exposure in the crowd.

F. Marion Crawford, the novelist and poet of Philadelphia's recent Centennial, is a man of many accomplishments besides his literary gifts. He is a good musician, being able to accompany his own songs on either piano or guitar. He is a rare linguist and an athlete of acknowledged power.

A tunnel between Dover and Calais is again agitated. The fear of some Englishman that it would be a way to invite invasion of England, is disposed of by the assurance of eminent scientists that it could be filled with water in six minutes. England is asked to build half of it at an estimated cost of £1,527,000.

Rev. Frank C. Haddock, son of the temperance martyr, has become an active member of the Des Moines conference of the Methodist Church. He entered the ministry as a Congregationalist, but left it to study and practice law. The murder of his father at Sioux City caused him to return to the ministry as an active worker for the cause of temperance.

General Miles has begun a series of movements with the soldiers under his command, in Arizona, in order to familiarize them with the methods of Indian warfare. A small party of soldiers, well-mounted and with their horses loaded as lightly as possible, left Fort Huachuca a few days ago, and will proceed 250 miles north to Fort Apache. They will be pursued by troops from all the posts in Southern Arizona. If the raiding party is not captured before reaching the point indicated, the troops will return and endeavor to capture the former pursuing party before reaching Fort Huachuca.

J. M. Bailey, once famous as the wit of the Danbury News, has faded from the humorous world and is now an actor in a daily repeated domestic tragedy. His wife is insane and demands his entire attention. He must dress her and arrange her hair, and attend to all her wants. She is like a child, and he gives her all his affection, time and attention. His devotion is described as something heroic.

Henry Brewster, the famous carriage-maker, died at his home in New York, Monday. He was a direct descendant of William Brewster, of the Mayflower. In 1878, Mr. Brewster received a medal from the Paris Exposition, and was tendered the cross of the Legion of Honor. He was also presented with a gold tablet from the American Carriage Manufacturers, for the honor brought upon them through his efforts.

Five burglars, Monday night, invaded the house of Dr. Hornblower, of Jersey City. Awakened from sleep, the doctor and his wife made a hand to hand pistol fight with the marauders, Mrs. Hornblower getting in her work chiefly with chairs, felling one burglar at the outset. The doctor fired his first shot by the light of a pistol fired by a burglar at his wife. The villains finally stampeded, leaving the valiant doctor wounded, but thirsting for his shot gun.

A party of distinguished Cubans, bound homeward from the North, with their wives and daughters, recently passed through Orlando, Fla. On the following day the local paper announced that the train bearing the party was loaded with Spaniards and Cubans, "said to be from New York en route for the cigar factories at Ybor City," and that "some of the women were very pretty." The party included Dr. De Cubas, a professor in the University of Havana; Evaristo y Duate, a prominent railroad man; Manuel Albar, the chief of the Engineer Corps of Havana, and many others of like distinction.

The car in which President Cleveland and his wife are to travel around the country during the next month is George M. Pullman's private car. It is now at the Pullman company's shops at Wilmington, Delaware, where it is being fitted with a new system of electric lighting on railways, and also partly refurnished. It has every possible convenience, from a piano and library to a cook stove. It also has a history, for it has carried nearly every great man, native or foreign, who has made an extended tour of the country in a dozen years. General Grant came east from San Francisco in it, and he used it with his family on several other journeys; it carried the late President Arthur when he made his memorable trip to Florida, and the Duke of Sutherland journeyed in it across the continent. Mr. Pullman is rather proud of the car on account of these associations, and he has no present thought of parting with it. "The newspapers are always building new cars for me at fabulous prices, and furnished with all the splendors of an Oriental palace," said Mr. Pullman recently, "but I'm going to stick by the old love. I suppose the reporters will be mad, but I can't help it."

A WONDERFUL MEXICAN CAVERN—REPUTED ABODE OF EVIL SPIRITS.

A Mexican correspondent of the Belfast Republican Journal writes from Cuernavaca, Mexico, describing a recent visit to a cavern little known to Americans:

Arriving at last near the entrance to the cavern, we dismounted and climbed the rest of the way on foot, among stones and gravel, to the mysterious mouth of the mountain. Here—sacrilegious though it seemed—while the guides and mozos were preparing torches and making ready the fireworks, we sat down with the breath of subterranean chambers blowing upon us, and fortified ourselves for labors to come on chicken and hard eggs, biscuits and sherry, with egg shells for glasses, green leaves for napkins, and fingers for forks.

The sun was already high in the heavens and shining with intense brightness on the wild scenery that surrounded us, when with sensations of awe, not unmixed with the superstitious fears of our Indian companeros—who believe the cavern to be the abode of evil spirits, we turned from daylight to eternal darkness, and strained our eyes to look down the well-like passage. The entrance is a superb portal, more than seventy feet high and one hundred and fifty feet wide, and the rocks which support the great arch are so symmetrically disposed that it is hard to believe they are not the work of art. Huge blocks of broken rock are tossed about in wildest confusion, and clambering straight down, perhaps two hundred feet, what was our astonishment to find ourselves in a magnificent but gloomy palace, filled with the most gigantic and uncanny figures the imagination can conceive. Our guides had kindled a fire here, and its ruddy glow, flickering upon ourselves and the strange forms of the vast labyrinth, made us all look unreal as a company of witches and rendered it hard to realize the weird figures were but the fantastic productions of the water which through un-numbered slow centuries had been trickling, drop by drop from the roof.

Each man was given a torch to carry and each lady a tallow candle, while the guides ahead flashed their lights along the walls and occasionally illuminated the subterranean chambers with fireworks; giving us repeated (but unnecessary) instructions to remain close together. Nobody had the slightest disposition to stray away and try his or her luck in the winding galleries and mysterious compartments of that unknown and dreadful darkness.

The first grand apartment is said to be about two hundred feet long by seventy wide. The walls are beautifully shaded with varying tints of green and yellow, while great streaks of stalacites hang from the roof, and lofty pillars, palm trees, pyramids, white-sheeted phantoms and a thousand other illusions arise on every side. In these stupendous masses every one sees different creations of his own fancy, the only one figure concerning which all agree is that of the long-haired goat, the evil spirit of Indian tradition. But his head has been knocked off by some sacrilegious vandal, who probably wished to demonstrate the powerlessness of the cave's enchanted guardian. It is the general belief that no living animal has been found within the cave; but I can testify to the presence of myriads of bats. An explorer who spent the night here with a party of Americans, assures me that he not only heard the hissing of snakes in the darkness, but that they were frightened almost out of their wits by the sudden appearance of some fierce beast, having the spotted skin of a leopard, whose loud roarings echoed terrifically among the vaults, and which, after gazing at them by the light of their torches, stalked majestically back into the darkness, where they had no disposition to pursue him.

In the second vast apartment our astonishment increased at every step. Sometimes we seemed to be in an underground Egyptian temple, nature's architecture being decidedly Oriental and the strange forms everywhere about us resembling uncouth idols. The multitude of pyramids and obelisks suggested the thought that perhaps the ancient people, who, ages ago, built those Egyptian-like palaces in the south of Mexico, took their architectural ideas from some natural cave of this description—just as nature herself suggested the beautiful Corinthian pillar.

Then we entered an apparently enchanted country, in which everything had been turned to stone. There are fountains of petrified water, icy pyramids a hundred feet high, trees hung with frozen moss, columns covered with gigantic acanthus leaves, pillars whose lofty tops were lost in the shadows overhead—all looking like the work of pre-Adamites, yet evidently wrought only by Him who inhabits eternity. This second chamber is higher than the first, and is said to be four hundred feet long.

We passed into an immense double gallery, supported by pyramidal formations of great size—stalagmites, formed by water dropping on the earth. A thousand odd figures are found here—Gothic shrines, mummies, Druids, with flowing beards. Shapes that startle the beholder like some wild dream; and among them are countless pyramids, obelisks and basins which seem to be made of purest alabaster. Great drops trickled down upon our heads, and upon the wet and slippery ground are an incalculable number of small, perfectly rounded balls, dead white petrifactions, forming little hollows where they lie. We thought of Rip Van Winkle's brownies, playing ten pins among the Catskills, and were fain to hasten lest we, too, become pillars of stone.

By and by we came to another and still loftier corridor, supported by pillars covered with what seemed to be creeping plants and rows of gigantic stone cauliflowers—each leaf most delicately chiselled and looking like appropriate food for the colossal dwellers of the cavern. As the torches flashed upon masses of rock and hillocks crowned with temples and pyramids, congealed torrents that seemed to belong to the north pole and Doric columns like those of Greece, we gave ourselves up to admiration; but to attempt anything like minute description is entirely out of the question.

Among all these curious accidents, produced by dropping water, none is more exquisite than a perfect amphitheatre, ten times larger than that at Chautauqua, with regular benches, surrounded by an immense organ whose pipes, when struck, give forth a deep musical sound. This organ formation is not uncommon in caverns. I have seen it in those at Luray, Harper's Ferry, Pesqueria, etc., and am told that it is also found in Kentucky's Mammoth Cave. It is not difficult to fall in with the Indians' belief that supernatural beings have their sanctuary in these petrified solitudes, or that they were built by some race of Titans in the morning twilight of time.

I cannot tell you how far we went—it seemed impossible to calculate time and distance among these stupendous masses. The interior of the mountain has been explored only about twelve miles, and it is believed that greater wonders lie beyond. As we advanced, the way became more difficult, because of detached masses of crystal rock, and a sound of rushing water came faintly from a distance. Our guides now strongly urged return, and suspecting the true reason to be that they were afraid of losing themselves and us in this mighty tomb, we reluctantly retraced our steps, leaving unexplored numerous corridors branching off into the darkness.

Economy and strength are peculiar to Hood's Sarsaparilla, the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true.

THEY PAY $500, OR CURE.
For many years the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, who are thoroughly responsible financially, have offered in good faith, through nearly every newspaper in the land, a standing reward of $500 for a case of nasal catarrh, no matter how bad, or of how long standing, which they cannot cure. The remedy is sold by druggists at only 50 cents. It is mild, soothing, cleansing, deodorizing, antiseptic and healing. sept27 d&w1w

CAUTION!
In our changeable climate, coughs, colds, and diseases of the throat, lungs and chest will always prevail. Cruel consumption will claim its victims. These diseases, if attended to in time, can be arrested and cured. The remedy is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. sept26 d&w1w

AN IMPORTANT ELEMENT
Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitation, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

CONSUMPTION CURABLE.
It cannot be two often impressed on everyone that the much dreaded consumption (which is only lung scrofula), is curable, if attended to at once, and that the primary symptoms so often mistaken as signs of diseased lungs, are only symptoms of an unhealthy liver. To this organ the system is indebted for pure blood, and to pure blood the lungs are indebted no less than to pure air for healthy action. If the former is polluted, we have the hacking cough, the hectic flush, night-sweats, and a whole train of symptoms resembling consumption. Rouse the liver to healthy action by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, take healthy exercise, live in the open air, and all symptoms of consumption will disappear. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, shortness of breath, chronic nasal catarrh, bronchitis, asthma, severe coughs, and kindred affections, it is a most wonderful remedy. sept27 d&w1w

A little child, tired of play, had pillowed his head on a rail and fallen asleep. The train was almost upon him when a passing stranger rushed forward and saved him from a horrible death. The Executive and the Laws.

The Commercial sounds its familiar tocsin of alarm to the rum traffic most furiously over the announcement that the Governor and Council have decided to act favorably upon the petition of a number of citizens of Bangor for the appointment of constables under the State law to enforce the statutes against the sale of intoxicating liquors. That paper seems to think that the Governor is under no obligation to see that the laws are faithfully executed, in any locality, unless he is called upon to do so by a majority of its voters. It says that only one hundred of the four thousand voters of the city signed the petition, and it argues that if only one out of forty of the people of this city desire that the laws shall be enforced, and the other thirty-nine are satisfied or indifferent, the Governor ought not to listen to the petition of the "minority."

But it happens that the laws of Maine do not provide for local option or relieve the Governor from his obligation to impartially enforce the laws because only a minority of some community may petition for it. The law in regard to such petitions is specific and clear, as follows:

Chapter 27, Section 62. Upon petition and representation of thirty or more well known tax-payers in any county that chapters seventeen and twenty-seven [for the suppression of nuisances and the sale of intoxicating liquors], are not faithfully enforced by county or local officers, the Governor and Council shall inquire into such representations, and if, in their judgment, they are well founded, the Governor, with the advice and consent of Council, shall appoint two or more constables for such county, who shall diligently enforce said chapters, and for this purpose such constables shall have like powers and duties as sheriffs and deputies. For such services such constables shall receive the same compensation as sheriffs and deputies.

The wording of that law leaves no room for misunderstanding. The Governor and Council are bound to entertain the petition of thirty well known tax-payers, and if in the "judgment" of the Governor and Council the complaints of non-enforcement of the law "are well founded," the law says the Governor "shall appoint" the constables.

The only question that can properly arise, is as to the correctness of the "judgment" of the Governor and Council in a particular case; and if in this case it can be shown that an erroneous judgment has been formed, we have the fullest confidence that the Governor and Council upon evidence thereof would promptly reverse their decision. The sensible course, therefore, for those who believe that the action of the Executive has been based upon misinformation, would be to immediately bring to the notice of the Governor and Council such facts as may serve to show that the laws mentioned "are faithfully enforced by county or local officers." It seems to us that when a number of reputable citizens appeal to the Governor for the enforcement of the laws, our County and City authorities should at once take measures to demonstrate to the Chief Magistrate that no special action by him is required to secure such enforcement, or else the Governor should not be denounced for doing what his oath of office requires.

Ex-Senator Caldwell, of Kansas, says the Republicans of that State are for Blaine, with John Sherman second choice.

In assigning reasons for the defeat of the Thistle the friends of the visiting yacht give all but the right one, namely, that she encountered a faster yacht.

The permanent Republican clubs in Ohio number seventy-five and they claim to be the best equipped political organizations in the country. A State union of those clubs is known as the Republican League.

It is again reported that a Tammany Brave is to take the scalp of Postmaster Pearson, of New York. This would be a last deadly blow to the Mugwumps who have heretofore fallen back on Pearson as the one reform spot in the two years of Cleveland rule.

One of the principle features of the New York Democratic convention was the appearance of a host of federal officials on the floor as delegates. It is only Republicans that are prohibited from any participation in politics under the Cleveland reform regime.

The Massachusetts Republicans held a large and harmonious convention yesterday. Gov. Ames was unanimously renominated as was also Lieutenant Governor Brackett. The only ballot was for Attorney General and A. J. Waterman was nominated, receiving 339 votes, against 251 for A. E. Pillsbury. The platform takes square ground in favor of protection for American industries. The Republicans are in excellent condition for the campaign and with proper effort will roll up a big majority in November.

The bolt among the independent Democrats of Maryland is assuming such proportions that the Gorman men are seriously alarmed at the political situation. Senator Gorman and his lieutenants are hard at work in their efforts to stem the current of public indignation and the Boston Post says that Higgins "in spite of the positive orders of the President to federal office holders to abstain from interference in politics, spends more than half his official time with his heelers in Baltimore." With such an admission in a Democratic organ it is folly to talk of Cleveland as a reformer. Higgins is not only retained in his office, but continues to run with the machine right in the face and eyes of the President.

The victory of the Volunteer in the first race for the America's cup is rendered particularly significant from the fact that the conditions of the race seemed to be especially favorable for the visiting yacht. Experts who had examined the Thistle and watched her preliminary spins all agreed that she would be a dangerous competitor in a light breeze. The Volunteer, they thought, might outsail her with a good stiff wind blowing, but with such a breeze as prevailed Tuesday they feared the Thistle would prove too much for the American yacht. It appears, however, that the Volunteer's capacity in light weather was underated and the handsome manner in which she walked away with the first trial heat gives strong assurance that another yacht than the Thistle will have to be built before the cup is taken from this country. The second trial will occur to-day, the course being from the Scotland Lightship, twenty miles to windward and back.

The Pension Record.

WHAT PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S POLICY AND ACTS HAVE BEEN—AN INTERESTING LETTER TO UNITED STATES SENATOR ALLISON, OF IOWA—THE FALSITY OF CERTAIN DEMOCRATIC CLAIMS SHOWN

GETTYSBURG, Pa. Sept. 19, 1887.

Hon. Wm. B. Allison, Dubuque, Iowa:

My Dear Sir—The "statement" to which you ask my attention, respecting "President Cleveland's official record on Union soldiers," copied from the National View a Washington (D. C.) weekly paper, bears the marks of preparation for a purpose. That purpose is to show that the Cleveland Administration is more entitled to the respect and confidence of the Union soldiery of the country than the administration of either Grant or Hayes or Arthur. It seeks to make the impression that Cleveland has been more liberal and more just to the soldiery than either of his predecessors. And it claims, in terms, that Cleve and has approved 77 more private pension bills than Grant and Hayes combined, and 127 more than Arthur.

The "statement" is false both in its assertions and its suggestions.

First. As to its assertions The pension story of the Forty-ninth Congress is this:

Pension bills passed in the two sessions,	949
Bills approved by Cleveland,	668
Bills vetoed by Cleveland,	124
Bills become laws by lapse of time without Cleveland's approval,	156
Bill "pocketed" by Cleveland,	1
Total,	949

Of the bills passed, 747 were in the first session of that Congress and 202 in the second session.

Of the bills vetoed, 101 were in the first session and 23 in the second.

Of the bills become laws without the President's signature, 154 were in the first session and 2 in the second.

The "pocketed" bill was in the first session.

I make up this table from the Congressional Record, the United States Statutes and other data, and believe the figures to be exactly correct.

The truth, therefore, is that President Cleveland "approved" about two-thirds of the bills passed, "vetoed" over one-eighth and "dodged" as to the remainder.

Second. As to the suggestions of the statement, its purpose is to contrast the Grant, Hayes and Arthur pension records with Cleveland's, to the advantage of the latter. Now what are the facts about those Administrations?

Of the 493 pension bills passed under the Grant Administration, Grant vetoed eight. Two, because the claimants' names were then on the pension roll. Another, because the clause in the act about the minor children of the soldier had no meaning. Three were vetoed because the names of the claimants were borne on the army rolls as deserters. Another, because the name of the pensioner was not correctly given. And the last, because the soldier's company was not correctly stated. He signed 485. This is Grant's record on pension vetoes.

What is Haye's and Arthur's record? Under Hayes, 303 private pension bills were passed. He approved them all.

Under Arthur, 736 private pension bills were passed by Congress. He approved them all.

Cleveland's approvals were but 668 out of 949 passed, and are thus 120 less than Grant's and Hayes combined, and 63 less than Arthur's, out of a total 153 greater than the former and 213 greater than the latter.

The contrast is what might have been expected in advance of investigation. Grant, Hayes and Arthur were all actually engaged in the suppression of the rebellion, and were in full personal sympathy with the armies of the Union. Cleveland's record as President is not out of harmony with his passiveness as a citizen during the struggle.

It is true, as claimed, that Cleveland signed the Widows' Increase bill and the Crippled Soldiers' Increase bill. It is also true that he signed the Mexican War Pension bill, which awards a service pension as distinguished from a disability pension to the soldiers of that war. But it is also true that within ten days thereafter he vetoed the bill which proposed application of substantially the same principle to the soldiers of the army of the Union. His friends have the floor to align that extraordinary discrimination against the Union soldiery with this extraordinary pretention of friendship for them.

It is a part of the same programme to claim, also, that at this date there are more Union soldiers in the Government service than at any previous period. This ought to be true, considering that the laws inherited by this Administration from its predecessors [distinctly direct] that preference shall always be given, other things being equal, to the honorably discharged Union soldiers. If it be not true, this Administration must have steadily violated this law. But in view of the proved misstatements touching pension bills, and of what is known concerning the methods adopted in filling those classes of appointments to which the civil service law was construed not to apply, and as to which, therefore, there was held to be no limit to the discretion of the appointing power, I am warranted in saying that until this last claim be clearly proved by published lists of removals and appointments made it must suffer from the discredit thrown upon its twin.

Undoubtedly the Pension Office is doing a great deal of work. Congress intended that it should, when the additional agents and clerks liberally given that office to meet the new and increasing demands upon it left its Chief without excuse for delays. Had the Commissioner of Pensions been less vigorous in administration, he would have simply been derelict in duty. But that fact does not hide from the public the other fact that while he has been granting many pensions to Union soldiers and widely advertising it, his own immediate Chief, and, indeed, the whole Administration have been engaged, without advertising it, in "making an average" by providing comfortable and responsible department positions for large numbers of representative Ku-Klux of 1875-'78.

This has certain elements of fitness in it. An Administration which was made by the Ku-Klux a possibility in our politics could hardly be expected to be indifferent to the aspirations of the agents who chiefly brought it into being. In this respect, also, there is a contrast between Grant and Oleveland. Grant did release from the penitentiary near the close of their term of imprisonment some of the Ku-Klux leaders who professed repentance and promised obedience to law. But he did not invite them to share with him the administration of the government. That crowning act of indifference to malignant crime against citizenship was reserved for an Administration which contains within its circles of department chiefs not one man with the reputation of having actively helped his country in its hour of peril, and which now, ludicrously enough, seeks to pose as the special friend of the men who snatched it from the brink to which, in zeal for slavery, the Democratic party had hurried it.

I am very respectfully,
your obedient servant,
EDWARD MCPHERSON.

A TOILER.

There is scarcely a toiler, however small his earnings, but is able to take out and maintain at least a thousand dollar policy. Wives and mothers who may be left, you cannot say how soon, to battle with the selfishness of the world emptyhanded, see to it that your husbands do not fail in this one great duty to you and your children! Toilers of the land, free yourselves from the life consuming dread of what will become of your families when you have gone from them by providing for that eventful day, as you may through the benefaction of life insurance! If the rich, those who have the probability of saving something out of the wrecks of fortune, see it a duty to have an asset the fluctuations of business cannot affect, how much more is it a duty in those who have nothing beyond the wage return for their daily labor to provide for the contingencies of that day which cannot be thrust aside, but comes to all—the day of death —[Omaha Republican.

KENTUCKY DIAMONDS.

A recent number of SCIENCE says that "the geological conditions of the soil of Kentucky are such, that there's a great chance of finding diamonds in it." We hope the report may prove true and that searchers may be rewarded for their pains with a nearer approach to the gem than the fragments of the old Bourbon receptacles that the soil must bristle with, for in that event some of them may stray down East to be mounted artistically in SOLID GOLD, by

AFTER THE BATTLE.

Captain Barr Greatly Depressed.

Comments of the English Press.

A More Detailed Account of the Race.

NEW YORK, Sept 28 Captain Barr feels the defeat of yesterday more than any one else and is exceedingly despondent today He looks worn and haggard as though he had passed a sleepless night. Commodore Clark complained of the recklessness of the steamboat captains in bunching around the racers. "I was really frightened yesterday," he said, "and ordered our anchors dropped The trouble with you Americans is that you get too easily excited and then grow reckless "

No Change in the Sails.

Nothing will be done in the way of changing the sails of the Thistle as they are considered as nearly perfect as they can be made The only uncertainty in the minds of the Scotchmen seems to be as to the condition of the vessel's bottom It was finally concluded that it would not be necessary to dock the Thistle and that she would remain at Tompkinsville till it was time to start for Sandy Hook for tomorrow's races

What the London Papers Say

LONDON, Sept 28 The Post believes that if the wind will blow strong enough, the Thistle will yet win

The Telegram says It cannot be denied that America has maintained the yachting supremacy she won 36 years ago

The Standard says It is useless to attempt to minimize the defeat We can at least take the beating good temperedly and congratulate our conquerors upon having surpassed their previous records

The News, commenting on the yacht race says The result is a bitter disappointment The Thistle lost in the wind of her own choosing

The Chronicle says The next race may be the reverse of yesterday's contest The Americans may be congratulated

The Standard says The Thistle's defeat will cause almost as much surprise as regret among English yachting men

Astounded at the Result

The yachtmen of the Clyde are astounded at the result of yesterday's contest between the Thistle and Volunteer, and a majority are despondent respecting the result of the series of races Many blame Barr for standing in too close to land and reason that it was by doing so that he lost yesterday's race

A More Detailed Account of the Race.

When the starting gun was fired at 12 30, the Thistle and Volunteer were over toward the Bay Ridge side of New York harbor and the Thistle had worked into the better position She had the Volunteer astern of her, and was heading for the starting line on the port tack The Volunteer was after her and she had just put on her jibtopsail The sail area of the Volunteer was the larger and her jibtopsail was greater than the Thistle's

The Fight for Victory

had now started The Thistle held the lead, with the Volunteer about 200 yards astern of her The wind was from the south, the tide was dead low, and the breeze was not over three knots Under these conditions the yachts started, the Thistle crossing the line at 12 33 06 and the Volunteer at 12 34 58¼ All eyes were strained, and on board the Electra there were heavy doubts The Thistle had the lead and was sailing well in the light air It was just her play—light air and smooth sea and everything drawing Just astern of her came the Volunteer She took the bone in her mouth at once, and, with Capt Haff at the wheel to guide her she went for the Scotch cutter It was different work now Her sheets were not flattened in as they were during the play before the line, and she was allowed to have her own way Every one was surprised to see the way the heavy weather yacht was making progress in the light air

From the Start

she gained on the Thistle, something wholly unlooked for under the conditions, and she was not only drifting faster than the Thistle but she was working out to windward of her The Volunteer's gain was perceptible and she was overhauling the Thistle Things must have been getting rather doubtful on board the Scotch cutter for the white sloop was shutting out the gap at the start The Scotchmen were being taught a lesson, and the "sure thing" that they thought they had over the Volunteer was not quite so sure after all Many people thought that Capt Barr was getting rattled and that he was pinching the Thistle too much and cutter men went so far as to say that he was killing her He had nothing left to do but to jam her for there was the Volunteer coming on him and gaining too She must not be allowed to go to windward of her so

Luffing was Resorted To

Capt Barr held the better position, and he was just far enough ahead to come about on the starboard tack and force about the Volunteer which was on the port tack It was a good move to try if he could get the Volunteer into the trap he intended for her About the Thistle came on the starboard tack at 12 39, and she held over for the Volunteer which was quite near her Commodore Bell evidently thought that he would force Gen Paine to put the Volunteer about, and if he did so the Thistle would have her safe under her lee, and it would be a question if ever she got out from under her The owner of the Thistle did not put the proper estimate on his opponent Gen Paine has been too long in the business to get caught in that trap Instead of putting the Volunteer about Capt Haff gave her a "good full," and the way she slid by the stern of the Thistle was a caution It was

shown during the race The tables were now turned The Thistle, on the starboard tack was standing over toward Ray Ridge and the tide had just begun to turn and it was on the flood This was a disadvantage to the Thistle and it told against her The minute she had at the start was now dwindling down to seconds, and the Volunteer was getting into a safe berth inshore and getting the land breeze, what there was of it She was being sailed well and Gen Paine was on his feet

On board the Thistle the glories of victory and the chances of quaffing a wee drop of Scotch whiskey out of the America's cup were fast fading, for the Volunteer in the first ten minutes of the race asserted her superiority It was getting monotonous out where the Thistle was, and it was safe to say that the Scotchmen's spirits were drooping Inshore the Volunteer was having great luck A light land breeze was helping her along and she was out of the tide, and getting all she could out of it The Thistle was losing her lead where she was, so she was stayed about on the port tack and held over after the Volunteer

The Race Now Got Exciting.

The Volunteer was holding along the Clifton shore and the Thistle was heading for it on the port tack. The yachts were nearing each other and every one exclaimed "Just look at this" It will decide the question whether or not the Volunteer has gained enough to cross the Thistle " It was an anxious wait, and the result was sure to bring great joy to the thousands of Americans if the Volunteer was successful It must have been a nervous time on the Thistle It was no use, the Volunteer had the best of it, and at 12 47 she weathered the Thistle, crossed her bow and had the weather gauge on her, and now had the first place in the race. It was too good a thing to let go by without notice so off went the guns, whistles screeched, men and women cheered, and the day looked better for the Yankees. The Thistle's sting was taken out of her, doubt had given away to confidence and the visitor was no longer the wonder she was claimed to be. She was now being sailed in a losing race, and somebody got rattled on her. Capt. Barr did not sail her with the master hand he was wont to, for the Scotch boat was pinched and luffed and he tried in every way to save her. The movement of putting the Thistle about, with a view of covering the Volunteer, proved to be a disastrous one, and it worked to the great disadvantage of the cutter.

After the Volunteer crossed her bows the wind left the Thistle. She was and scarcely moved where she was in mid-channel. She looked as if she was at anchor or the young flood tide was too strong for her.

During all this time the Volunteer was having a nice little breeze all to herself, and, of course, she dropped the Thistle by the foot The distance between them was opening all the while, and half an hour after the start, the Volunteer had a good lead of an eighth of a mile. It was poor comfort to the followers of the Thistle who were on board the Scotch steam yacht Mohican to see their boasted yacht treated so unkindly by the winds. It was food for the Volunteer's friends, and, of course, they were overjoyed at the good luck she was having. The Volunteer was standing out of the Narrows with a favorable wind, with the Thistle astern and to leeward of her, hung up for want of air The Volunteer's sails were drawing fairly well, but the headsails of the Thistle were up and down and her mainsail was not bellied out much was broken at 12.47, for she fell in with the low breeze and began to start after the Volunteer The Thistle had Capt. Sam Gibson for pilot, and this time, no doubt by his advice, she was held on to the Fort Wadsworth shore The wind began to haul, after the Volunteer and the Thistle passed through the Narrows, to the westward, and it grew fresher. The Volunteer held to the starboard tack, and passed buoy 13 nearly a quarter of a mile in the lead It was a dead beat to buoy 10, around which the yachts must sail, and both yachts were trimmed for it Once outside the Narrows the yachts were sailing for several miles in the same conditions of wind and water, and the Volunteer was doing the better sailing The steamers closed around the yachts and bothered them, and each suffered about equally The Volunteer had the lead and some followed close to her, kicking up a sea which did her no good The flagship Electra was followed in the Thistle's wake, and a good idea of how both boats sailed to windward could be formed. There was the white centreboard ahead, holding a good full, outsailing and outwinding the Thistle The latter was in

The Thistle's Hard Luck

A Sorry Plight

She could not look as high as the Volunteer, pinched as she was, and it was luff and close off for miles with her At times she was held so high that the wind was spilled out of her head sails Designer Watson must have learned a lesson, and be evidently has made up his mind that the centre board is worth something in going to windward It was an easy job for the Volunteer to hold a better wind than the Thistle and still draw away from her

What was Capt Barr to do under the circumstances? If he wedged her off she would sail faster, but then she would fall off to leeward, and she would lose more to the Volunteer It was short tacking work out to buoy No 10, and the Volunteer outsailed the Thistle on every tack, and opened out on her steadily The wind would haul and then back and it worked against both of them As the Volunteer passed buoy 12 the wind began to flatten and neither yacht made much headway The luck seemed to be against the Thistle now, for the Volunteer got the wind first and gained still more on the Thistle may have done wonders in British waters in light airs, but she was doing nothing now, and the Volunteer was proving that in a drift or a breeze she was too much for the other boat The Thistle seemed dead, there was no go in her, and she fell behind the Volunteer very fast Splendidly was the Volunteer steered Capt Haff sailed her with a skilled hand All her head sails were pulling and a tremble in the leach of the jibtopsail told just how finely she was sailed The Thistle's head sails were filled then the wind was spilled out of them, and she was not steered in the fine, delicate way the Volunteer was He must be a master hand at the wheel who could do better than Capt Haff Cool as he always is he sailed the Volunteer splendidly, and not an error did he make all through the race It was tack and tack between them until the Volunteer rounded buoy 10 at 2 21 25 The tide was running out now quite strong, and the Volunteer was making better headway against it than the Thistle Gen Paine saw the danger of coming about after passing buoy 10 for the south west buoy, so that the Volunteer held on for the Jersey shores It proved

for the Volunteer was able to weather the southwest spit As she passed the spit guns were fired on the different yachts, the steamers blew their whistles and all was excitement The Volunteer was away for the Sandy Hook lightship on the starboard tack, and the wind was blowing eight knots from the southeast It was a reach out, and the Volunteer could make it without tacking The pilots and skippers who were in charge of the accompanying steamers now began to crowd on to the Volunteer and cut off her wind Gen Paine evidently anticipated such a thing, for suddenly he hung on the port quarter of the Volunteer a white cloth sign with "Keep astern" on it This was seen at once, and as soon as possible nearly all the steamers got out of the way

The Thistle, when the Volunteer rounded buoy 10 was at least 1½ miles astern and the same distance to leeward Capt Barr tried to make the buoy but he could not, so he was forced to make a tack a quarter of a mile to leeward of the buoy A big fleet of steamers lay at the buoy waiting for the Thistle to round, ready to give her a good send off to hold to windward of the buoy, and just saved herself from being forced down on it by the strong flood tide She rounded the buoy at 2 36.45, or just 17 minutes 34¼ seconds astern of the Volunteer The distance out to this mark is about eight miles and it was a great beating

The steamers, after the Thistle rounded started after the Volunteer, and got just close to her Again the sign "Keep off" was put on the quarters of the Volunteer, but some of the tugboat captains did not heed it and they crowded on to her and made quite a suction under her lee The captain of the big side wheeler Sam Sloan was asked by the police authorities to keep away from the Volunteer, but no place would do him except under her lee Of course the steamer formed a bank to leeward of the white sloop, and it broke the Volunteer's wind His ears must have burned, for many a savage remark was made about him The Thistle suffered in the first part of the race by the steamers, now the Volunteer was having her share of it It was dull music for them to keep with the Thistle two miles astern and it seemed as if by signal that all started to the Volunteer ahead. This left and she had a good chance Then the Volunteer gained on her, even at that, and rounded Sandy Hook lightship at 3 42 13 Such a roar of whistles never was heard at a turning mark, the noise of the Genesta and Galatea races was put in the shade and the screeching was kept up for many minutes The Volunteer was away on the port tack, with sheets off a bit, and how she did reach! She passed the Thistle on her way back, and a band on one of the excursion steamers which was close to the Volunteer struck up "The Girl I Left Behind Me," everybody laughing at this except the canny Scots, it was not so soothing to them. The Volunteer kept on and passed buoy 8½ on her way home at 4 3[illegible]

After rounding the buoy, the spinnaker boom was lowered to starboard. In an instant the spinnaker was broken out, and away she went, with spinnaker and mainsail winged, off for the goal She was now running off the wind, and it would be a dangerous thing for the steamers to follow in her wake, as they would shut off the wind from her and

Lesson Her Chances for the Race.

She was followed by some of the steamers and lost by it, but she was so far ahead it made no great difference, though it helped the Thistle, which was astern and all alone, to gain on her. The wind began to freshen, still being from the southeast, and the Thistle felt the benefit first and it helped her along. The race was now practically won. The Volunteer was over two miles ahead, and the first race for the cup was safe. It was a procession now, the Volunteer ahead, surrounded by steamers, and the Thistle not yet turned the southwest spit on her return It was a hopeless task for the Scotchman, and she was getting beaten even worse than the Genesta and the Galatea. After she rounded the spit buoy she broke out her spinnaker, and, with a fresh breeze came bowling home. She had the best of the breeze. There was more of it astern, and she gained just a little on the Volunteer. The latter crossed the line at 5 o'clock 28 minutes 16¼ seconds, and no yacht ever received such a reception at the finish of a race. It was to the first race, and the Volunteer still retains her spotless record, never beaten in a race. The Thistle crossed the line at 5.48 53¾ o'clock, a beaten yacht by 19 minutes 23¾ seconds. She gained on the Volunteer in the race home from Sandy Hook lightship 1 minute and 26¾ seconds. The scare has been taken out of the American yachting public, and the Thistle is no longer feared in light winds

There is not much sympathy for the Thistle people, on account of their conduct during all the negotiations, now that the true merits of their wonderful craft have been found out. There is many a laugh at all their childishness.

From what has been seen of both yachts to-day, the Thistle's chances of winning the cup are poor. Many predict that if there is a big sea and heavy blow on Thursday in the windward race she will be the worst beaten single sticker that ever raced for the cup.

The crew of the Volunteer had a war dance after the white sloop crossed the line, and no one begrudged them the pleasure It was a great victory, and Gen Paine and Capt Haff deserve great credit

The Thistle received a grand ovation at the finish, and Commodore Bell and Mr Watson acknowledged it by standing on deck with their hats off. Considering the force of the wind and head tide both ways, the time made by the Volunteer was very fast

Mr Burgess Confident of To-Day's Result.

NEW YORK, Sept 28 Mr Burgess, speaking of yesterday's race, said: "Of course we were pleased more than pleased, but not surprised at the Thistle's failure in light winds, but did not think we would leave her so far behind We expect to win to-morrow's race

I don't think the weather makes any difference In the race yesterday we seemed to gain all the time rather than lose At the start we had a little the best of the wind, favored by the fact that the Thistle made across our bow toward Long Island After that the favors of wind and tide were even

THE GRAND ARMY.

The Postponed Parade Takes Place

In the Midst of a Pouring Rain.

General Sherman Receives an Ovation.

ST LOUIS, Mo, Sept 28 The postponed parade of the Grand Army took place to-day in the rain Ten divisions were in line Shortly before 11 o'clock the column was formed The Commander-in-Chief was wrapped in a rubber coat and smiled and bowed to the crowds who lined the streets All along the line he was greeted with applause His staff of a hundred men mounted preceded twenty carriages moving three abreast in which were the War Governors and other honored guests

In the lead was one occupied by Mayor Francis and Gen Sherman Although closely sheltered from rain and sight the crowd on the sidewalks soon found where the old commander was and marked his progress down the street, while frequent groups of men would rush from their shelter to the carriage door to grab his hand As the column passed under the beautiful stained glass transparency of Gen Grant on Fourth street all uncovered their heads and passed in silence

The head of the procession reached the Grand Army arch, that spans Olive street at Twelfth, at noon Commander in Chief Fairchild, Gen Sherman Ex Vice-President Hannibal Hamlin the War Governors and other distinguished guests left their carriages and took their positions in the grand stand just east of the arch Across the street, facing the grand stand, Grand Marshal Grier and staff sat in their saddles, while the rain increasing in volume, for one hour and a half of the passing soldiers. Missouri's Contingent was twenty-five minutes in passing, Illinois fifteen minutes, Kansas' twelve Other states were represented by posts and regiments Along the line of march were thousands of boys in blue, who thought it too wet to march In the balcony of the grand stand Commander in-chief Fairchild and General Sherman, partly protected from the storm, bowed to the boys as they passed, acknowledging the continually rousing cheers that went up from each post as they filed by in company front Here and there throughout the different divisions marched a colored post Their salute was invariably the signal for applause from those in the grand stand, which was several times taken up by the crowd and prolonged into a hearty cheer The dripping flags

Received Much Boisterous Notice

as the squad carrying them passed by The enthusiasm was unbounded Through out the column an occasional warrior carried a cane or pole, on which was dangling a chicken, a leg of mutton, a side of bacon, a cabbage or some other representation of a foraging expedition on commissary stores As the right of the line reached its destination the troops broke ranks and hastened back to the reviewing stand to get a glimpse of the commanders

They Came with Such a Rush

that it threatened destruction to the rest of the column A mounted staff of the Illinois division soon forced its way through the crowd and cleared a passage At 1 30 o clock, the Sons of Veterans brought up the rear and the crowd made a rush for the grand stand to see and shake hands with "Uncle Billy" The General refused to respond to numerous calls for a speech and finding an opportunity skipped into his carriage and was quickly driven away

Opening of the Grand Encampment

The encampment was opened in due form at Entertainment Hall, Exposition Building, at 3 30 P M Commander-in Chief General Fairchild presided The committee on credentials was appointed The annual address of the Commander-in Chief was then presented It gave the total members at the last National Encampment, 326,499, number June 30th, 1897, 372,654, actual gain, 46,155

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS.

Doings of the State Convention.

SARATOGA, N Y Sept 28 The committee on resolutions had a lively time during their deliberations last night and this morning. Dorsheimer and Cooper, it is alleged, each had planks for insertion in the platform and the result was constant commotion

It was 11 20 before the convention was formally called to order At 11.35 recess was taken until 12 30 P M

The platform demands that federal taxation be reduced by not less than $100,000,000 yearly, with due regard to the interests of capital and labor, by the abolition or reduction of the duties on imported raw materials and on the necessaries of life; that public lands wrongfully withheld from settlers by corporations be restored to the public domain, favors a reduction of the government expenses; favors a day's work not to exceed 10 hours and weekly payments of wages in money, favors a revised excise law; opposes all sumptuary laws which needlessly interfere with the reasonable habits and customs of any class of citizens In conclusion it favors civil service reform if faithfully carried out, but declares that in view of the radical charge of administrative methods which grow out of the civil service laws and the difference of opinion in relation thereto, the subject is one which might appropriately be submitted to popular vote This clause elicited great applause.

Frederick Cook was nominated for Secretary of State by acclamation Lawrence J. Fitzgerald was nominated for Treasurer by acclamation, as was Charles F. Tabor for Attorney General. John Bogert was nominated for State Engineer and Surveyor by acclamation.

At four o'clock the convention adjourned sine die.

Monte Cristo

James O'Neill the popular young actor and his fascinating play are so well known and have met with such unqualified success, that extended comment as to their merits is nearly superfluous The following short extract from a leading journal however may be of interest

Mr O'Neill long since caught the spirit that animates the hero of this novel As Edmund Dantes he has the careless grace, droll humor and brusque heartiness characteristic of the honest sailor lad As the Count his bearing has the dignity firmness and air of high breeding befitting the man of the world who has but a single end [illegible] yet through all the phases of the character there runs that delicate vein of identity which at once exalts Mr O'Neill's effort to the dignity of a superbly balanced and harmonized artistic impersonation Seats will be placed on sale to morrow morning for the engagement of next Monday and Tuesday

It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, pustular eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and over a year had two running sores on my neck. Took five bottles Hood's Sarsaparilla, and am cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me. had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

He tried various preparations without aid, finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: "I am entirely well."

BLANKS of every description printed, at the shortest notice, at the Whig and Courier Job Office. B. A. BURR.

The Magazines.

The October number of THE ECLECTIC MAGAZINE accords first place to Prince Krapotkine, the Nihilist, who contributes an article entitled The Coming Anarchy, in which he exemplifies his expectation of the means by which the philosophy of history will solve the difficult problems now before us. Ireland's Alternatives, by Lord Thring, is a presentation of the Anglo-Irish question. The poet Swinburne, in a paper, which he calls Whitmania, severely attacks the claims made for Walt Whitman by his friends. Wagner's Letters to Frau Eliza Wille, throw light on the great composer's life and character, and are of great interest in themselves. Arnot Reid compares the English and American press, and W. H. Mallock continues his suggestive papers on Wealth and the Working Classes. A second article by the great painter, Holman Hunt, finishes his interesting description of his painting one of his greatest pictures, and his Syrian adventures therein. The two closing articles are among the best in an excellent number. The Roman Matron and the Roman Lady, by Mrs. E. Lynn Linton, a capital study of the status and character of women in old Rome; and The Island of Serk; a Sermon in Stones, by Sophia Weisse, a charming description of one of the most wild and picturesque of the Channel Islands. The shorter articles are well selected and the editorial departments of ordinary interest.

Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York. Terms, $5 per year; single numbers, 45 cents; trial subscriptions for three months, $1. Eclectic and any $4 magazine, $8.

The Fashions.

[From the New York Evening Post.]

The new changeable watered silks and velvets are extremely rich and elegant in effect.

Green in many distinct tints, from golden green to the dark moss and myrtle shades, is a conspicuous color in autumn millinery. It is used in conjunction with black, white, jonquil yellow, pink, Persian lilac terracotta, certain shades of blue, Roman red, Venetian bronze, and many novel neutral tints in plush and velvet shot with a contrasting color.

A stylish costume exhibited by an uptown importer is made of dove-colored India cashmere combined with gray and white plaided velvet, and trimmed with white and silver gimp. The cashmere is arranged as a long polonaise, opened at each side and buttoned diagonally across the front, the buttons reaching from the left shoulder to the right hip. There is a full drapery at the back, and the sleeves of cashmere are cut in points above the elbow, from which issue close coat sleeves of the plaided velvet. The points of the Vandyked sleeve are bordered with the gimp.

English tailors are sending to America handsome coats made of pilot cloth, German broadcloth, and fine diagonals; in dark autumn colors of bronze brown, terracotta, moss green, heliotrope, wine, mulberry, dahlia, and the like. There also are imported extra heavy jerseys, which are to be worn during the fall in lieu of a jacket. These are elegantly finished and decorated. One London costume shows a skirt of plaided surah, in colors of terracotta, Venetian green, and bronze the plaids crossed with a vivid line of gold. Added to this skirt, which is draped in a very original and unique manner, are two walking jerseys, one of terracotta, trimmed with rich galloons in cashmere colorings, the other of Venetian green, decorated with narrow passementerie in bright gold.

A complete novelty for evening dress consists of a cuirass bodice made throughout of open beaded passementerie, to wear over a second waist of lace, net, or silk. The bodice is shaped much like the peasant waist of other days, and is as rich and effective as it is expensive. Velvet is also used for these bodices, the edges, which curve to a point below the chest, and at the back just below the shoulders, being enriched by a hand embroidery of garnet, amethyst, bronze jet, emerald, or terra cotta beads. This embroidery also shows at the lower edge of the bodice, which is cut in an extra deep point, front and back.

The fashion of wearing tea-gowns has so increased within the last two years that a number of these picturesque and graceful dresses find a place in the most modern wardrobes. These gowns are made in a much more elaborate fashion than was at first the case, when they presented the appearance merely of an improvement upon the robe de chambre, and were simply donned between the time of changing an afternoon toilet and dressing for dinner. French and English designers now give special attention to the tea-gown, and vie with each other in producing striking novelties and effects. The original intention of usefulness and comparative ease is lost sight of, in many instances the figure being so closely fitted that the gown may be worn at a dinner party by the hostess, or at any informal social gathering.

The basques of new autumn tailor gowns, notwithstanding the fact that they are made of wool, are this season elaborately trimmed in front. The sides of basques are considerably longer than those worn for a year past. The pleated vest, the surplice front lapping from side to side, the separate waistcoat (covered with braiding or appliques in silk gimp), and folds, and revers of all kinds, are just as fashionable upon woolen dresses, both light and heavy, as upon the diaphanous toilets of the summer past. Among new vests worn beneath cutaway jackets are those which show a pointed yoke of velvet to which is shirred a full waist, this brought down closely to the belt in trimly-arranged pleats, with a deep girdle above made of velvet matching the yoke. This yoke vest is sewed to a plain silesia waist at the shoulders and the underarm seams, and buttons snugly up the back.

This is again a wool season, that is all-wool materials rank first as favorites, and are either made up quite simply, with draperies of the same, or else used where a smarter style is required, in conjunction with plush or velvet. Blocks and checks rival stripes in favor. The new stripes, however, are unlike those with which we are familiar, in that the stripes are corded, the cord in many cases so defined by being raised above the ground, that they have the appearance of narrow lines of braid stitched on it, this being especially pronounced in those woolens of dark stripes on light grounds, and vice-versa. The wool ground of some of the handsomest of the raised striped textiles is generally of serge or camel's hair, and a very artistic effect is given by a woven flat stripe being set next that which is raised, and so cleverly managed that it looks as if it were a shadow cast by the bolder line.

Cocks' plumes are much used to trim round hats of straw and felt. They are seen also upon small princess bonnets. These plumes are arranged in close curved clusters instead of being allowed to fall straight and loose as formerly. The glossy black and dark-green feathers are especially stylish. Those handsomely dyed in various dark and brilliant shades are used in combination with the rich shaded velvets. The newest hats in felt curve over the forehead, rolling very high on each side of the brim. A pretty modification of that old but ever new and prime favorite, the English walking hat, is imported, the new shape less narrow on the front of the brim and not rolled so closely to the sides of the crown as the spring model, thus making it more than ever becoming to the slender-faced women to whom the shape is always a boon. The new felts are as soft and fine as velvet and richly dyed in all the fashionable colors of the season, deep orange not being omitted among the "telling" styles. Mottled, checkered, pinked, and beaded felts are shown, to be worn en suite with tailor costumes. A handsome bonnet displayed at a recent opening was made of dark green felt, the brim faced with a puffing of green velvet shot with gold. The loops of velvet in front were mingled with sprays of goldenrod with rich effect.

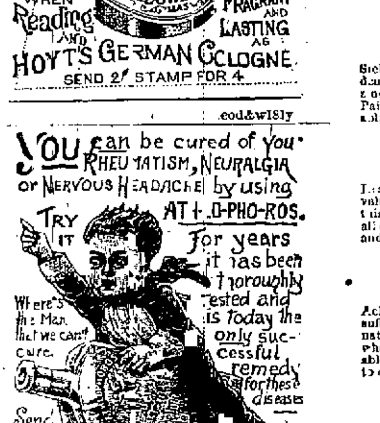

Pale and deep tan plush skirts are worn under autumn gowns of various colors and materials. Tan silk waistlets and tan-colored gimp trimmings are then added to the bodice. There is also a new reddish-brown, similar to the old-fashioned Bismarck brown, which is shown in costly dress fabrics, and is also commended both by the French and English for outside wraps, either coats, newmarkets, visites, to be worn with dresses of a deep, contrasting color, or to brighten black gowns. These are as fashionable abroad as the Neapolitan coats of vivid Roman red.

For home wear, are simple and pretty dresses of camel's hair, serge, or cashmere, with a pointed bodice, to which a single straight skirt is closely shirred, this bordered with braiding, moire, velvet ribbon in a number of rows, or a passementerie of applique silk cords. Sometimes there is merely a wide hem turned up on the right side and finished with a line of brier stitching in silk. The bodice is trimmed to match the skirt, and at the back is a wide sash of watered silk, or of a fabric like the dress, finished with a broad hem pressed to lie very flat.

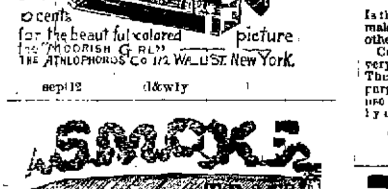

Silk cord passementerie, superb jet galloons in lattice patterns covered with sparkling pendants, and real laces in new designs are the trimmings most generally used upon black silk and satin gowns. Soft surplice folds of the silk are draped across the front of the basque, the pleats at the shoulders held by massive jet epaulets, and these, narrowing at the belt, are kept in place by a cut jet clasp or a huge jet buckle. Jet belts, Swiss girdles, dog collars, and wrist-bands are used upon gowns of black faille designed for young ladies. Silver gimps enriched with cut jet beading are another elegant and expensive garniture for costumes of black. Where colors are introduced, there is an almost limitless scope for ingenious and unique combination, for the gay striped and plaided velvets, moires plain and changeable, fancy satins brocaded with plush and velvet figures, and many other elegant novelties of the season, are noted upon black gowns of silk, satin, velvet, vigogne, and India cashmere, fresh from Parisian workrooms.
